City of Rockville Newsletter

Vol. 48 No. 10 October 2002

Rockville Housing Codes Inspectors Bill Calloway (left, wearing a marked "Inspector" helmet) and Chuck Aubertin will introduce the bicycle patrol program in the City this month.

Code Inspectors Launch A First in Bike Patrol

In an effort to increase visibility and effectively respond to citizens' input, the Department of Neighborhood and Community Services has incorporated the use of bicycles as part of its Code Enforcement Program.

By using bicycles for code enforcement, the inspectors hope to gain accessibility to areas that were difficult to access before.

"For example, there are areas in King Farm that are not vehicle accessible," said Housing Codes Inspector Bill Calloway. "There are alleys and many places that require more mobility. Before, we could park a car and walk, but with bikes now, we will be able to ride right up to a location and see much more."

According to Calloway, the bicycle program seems to be a first. After researching other code enforcement organizations, he has not been able to find another like it in the country.

The department will launch the pilot program in early October, and bike inspectors will soon become a familiar City site. The City will ensure that the Inspectors' bikes are easily identifiable by marking the bikes with large decals.

Using bicycles seem like a natural progression for the City that is working to establish itself as a bicycle mecca. The program will enable the Mayor and Council's goals of "Increased Mobility," "Superior City Services" and "Strengthening Neighborhoods."

Guerdon Stuckey, Director of Neighborhood & Community Services, said the bicycle program will serve as a tool for engaging, educating and enforcing, which are keys to a successful code enforcement operation.

"Our goal is to maintain and improve the quality of life here in Rockville," Stuckey said. "We need to keep an edge in the global economy, keeping Rockville an attractive place for homes and businesses. The bicycle program will address the immediate issues, enabling our strategies for the City in the long-term."

Calloway and Chuck Aubertin, also a City Housing Codes Inspector, recently completed the three-day Bicycle Patrol School administered by the Frederick City Police. At the school, they learned bicycle safety, defensive riding techniques and city riding tips, which prepared them to launch the program.

"The training was intense," Calloway said. "We rode 22 miles one day and 26 the next. I was quite sore, but I learned a great deal. I think it's a great idea for the City." ❖

Classic Cars Roll into Rockville on Oct. 19

One of the region's premier motor vehicle shows returns to the City of Rockville Saturday, Oct. 19. Hundreds of antique and classic cars will be on display from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

For more than 40 years the Rockville Antique and Classic Car Show has dazzled enthusiasts with an eclectic mix of automobiles. This year's event, at Rockville Civic Center Park, is expected to be as entertaining and exciting as ever.

And it is free to spectators.

"It's a Rockville tradition in October for citizens to come out and see the cars brought from all over Maryland and the surrounding states," said Colleen McQuitty, Events Specialist with the City's Department of Recreation and Parks.

This year's Antique and Classic Car Show promises to be one of the finest in Rockville history.

The colorful fall foliage in Civic Center Park is an added bonus for visitors.

The City expects more than 400 cars and more than 10,000 spectators. Based on pre-registration, the show hosted by the Mayor and Council is expected to be one of the largest in history. Organizers say that the show is open to motor vehicles (no custom/modified cars) up to and including 1977.

For registration information call 240-314-8606. Recorded information is available at 240-314-5022. More information can be found at www.ci.rockville.md.us.

The rain date for the event is Saturday, Oct. 26. ❖

Rockville's History in the Making

Rockville's Mayor and Council have established a program to encourage owners of historic homes to pursue Historic Designations for their properties. An Historic Designation carries tax incentives, often leads to increased property values and ensures preservation of neighborhoods.

A home at 119 Forest Avenue in Rockville, known for its past history as the Judge Donald and Elizabeth Delashmutt House, is under consideration for historic designation by Rockville's Mayor and Council. Owners Keith Jacobson and Katherine Michaelian realized that the house meets the eligibility criteria and found that preservation reaps tax benefits. Those benefits could help finance their kitchen remodeling.

This 1928 house reflects the growing sophistication of Rockville. It was designed for the Delashmutts by architect John W. Kearney in the picturesque 1920s "Jacobethan Bungalow" or Tudor revival style. In this era, most houses came from pattern books and were adapted by a builder, but this house was built by Rockville master builder Franklin Karn. It is large for its time—2,500 square feet—and rich in interior and exterior details such as diamond-paned casement windows and a flat-roofed section hidden away on the interior back corner and intended on plans for a roof garden.

Donald Delashmutt practiced law in Rockville and also served as Justice of the Peace and as a trial magistrate. Both Judge and Mrs. Delashmutt were officers of the Rockville Library Association and participated in other civic organizations.

The Michaelians purchased the home in 2001 from John G. and Marian Whelan, who lived in it for the prior 35 years. ♦

How You Can Make a Difference in Rockville

Charter Review Commission Seeks Input

Rockville's Charter Review Commission, which was appointed by the Mayor and Council to examine the City Charter—and other laws—relating to the election process in Rockville, held a Public Forum on Sept. 19. However, it is not too late for citizens to offer opinions on the major issues the commission is reviewing.

The commission, which is expected to have a final report of recommendations to the Mayor and Council by the end of this year, is still accepting written testimony. Opinions can be submitted to the City Clerk at City Hall, 111 Maryland Ave., Rockville, Md. 20850. Testimony also can be submitted via e-mail to cfunkhou@ci.rockville.md.us.

Volunteer with Boards and Commissions

The City of Rockville is calling for volunteers to serve on the 20-plus boards, commissions, committees and special task forces that provide the Mayor and Council with informed public opinions, thoughts and ideas to shape the City.

Although members of the boards and commissions are not paid, one benefit is the unique opportunity to affect the political process by working directly with the Mayor and Council. Boards and commissions meet usually once a month, and all general board, committee and commission meetings are open to the public. A schedule of meetings is printed each month in Rockville Reports.

If you are interested in serving on a citizen board or commission, please contact the Mayor and Council, c/o City Clerk, Rockville City Hall, 111 Maryland Ave., Rockville, Md. 20850, or contact the City Clerk's Office at 240-314-8280 for information regarding current vacancies. Check www.ci.rockville.md.us for details about each group.
